

where's the FCC? This is so much worse than an exposed breast or a four-letter word, this is a giant corporation trying to hijack an election!

Sinclair Broadcasting's blatant and outrageous decision to force their stations to air their anti-Kerry documentary right before the election is proof positive that media consolidation has gone too far.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Since they are spitting in the face of decorum and rubbing our noses in our own powerlessness, we cry for help from the FCC. Please, this is what the government is supposed to be for - to protect its citizens and to protect democracy.

Help us, please help us.

Sincerely,

Karl Narasaki
